D. IPAA Document (Action)

- Ann Marie Wagstaff pointed out that the diagram has improved and is also accurate and illustrates very well the problem we are still having. The Integration of Planning is circular; there is still nothing in the middle. There is no crisscross displayed in the diagram that integrates the planning together. Are these plans supporting each other, going off into different directions, overlapping or overview of the plans?
- Primavera Arvizu stated that the Integration Planning diagram demonstrates where the college is at this time since there were gaps found during accreditation. Strategic Planning will start looking at the matrix for plans and there will be a different version.

VII. Other Reports

A. President

- Attended the CCLC conference last week the focused topic was the new funding formula, understanding that it will trigger everything next to diversity. From the Chancellor's office and driven by the Board of Governors is another form of affirmative action. The Chancellor was very direct that this is not something you plan for its something that will need to be done. There is a huge push on diversity; the Chancellor's office is paying attention to the make-up of hiring committees. There will be a very direct and forceful way on voting will be done. The staffing needs to represent the college community as well as the community that the college is within.
- Received the faculty ranking and the administration has discussed them today, at length will need to look at them different and tie them to the funding formula. As the faculty rankings are being reviewed and how they influence the funding formula, the luxury of placing faculty in position to grow programs over a period of time no longer exist. There has to be an impact on completers and transfers and it has to be immediately.
- Accreditation team report is in and sent to the commission. The corrections that were forward into the report and has been reviewed and done.
